

Donald Trump puts the US first and will change US policy in a number of areas.

Who wants a leader who does not put the interests of the nation and the people first?

I would say that is of course! What matters then is, what does he do to make it happen? And, are the results what you would like?

He will establish customs walls to protect national business. Then there is reason to believe that it will primarily be aimed at China.

It is difficult to imagine that EU production threatens US production. The EU lacks energy. Has no oil business! Has a shortage of energy, may have to take up nuclear power again. Is dependent on raw material imports. Hardly a threat to the US economically.

Can the US exist without having anyone to trade with? Can you make a living from cutting hair yourself? Can the US completely isolate itself?

Who will perform the jobs that illegal immigrants perform?

What are the criteria for the USA to be "great again"? How is American society doing then?

Trump's presidential term is 4 years and then he is done. What happens to his ordinances then? Was anyone sensible and persistent? Some are understandable and can be supported. E.g. To withdraw from the Paris Agreement and stop the green shift. Because scientific verification is lacking! Another example is stopping illegal immigration. Because it creates problems that the country of emigration from must solve. The Panama Canal ensures the flow of goods around the world. Use should be as cheap as possible for everyone. Buying Greenland is idiotic, stupid. Taking Greenland by force is unacceptable. Allowing Canada to join the American Union should be fine. Compulsion is something else!

Will he be able to make the USA "great again" in four years?
